The monthly pay of this ship's company ocean steamer, of no larger dimensions than the Panama, is quite enormous. The item of coal alone is, by no means, inconsiderable, as the vessel consumes of good coal about 17 tons, and of poor coal, about 25 tons, per diem. The average price of coal in the Pacific is about $20 per ton, which would show that during a single trip, each vessel will consume, not less than 400 tons of coal, costing $8,000.

Acapulco, Thursday, 24th April. We arrived safely this morning, and find several vessels in port freighted with coal. I have just learned that the Rev. Mr. Hunt and lady are passengers on board the steamer Northerner. In haste. No more time to write.
